Asia has a lot of emerging countries and regions that are winning recognition in the world heat transfer community. To enhance more scientific interactions among Asian researchers, scientists, engineers, and practitioners working in the area of heat transfer, the regional international association, Asian Union of Thermal Sciences and Engineering (AUTSE), was established in November, 2015.

AUTSE has decided to launch a new series of conferences, Asian Conference on Thermal Sciences (ACTS): the first ACTS was held in Jeju, Korea in 2017 and the second ACTS will be held in Miyazaki, Japan in 2020 which is organized by Heat Transfer Society of Japan and co-organized by Heat and Mass Transfer Society of China and the Thermal Engineering Division of Korean Society of Mechanical Engineers (KSME).
